

New Precipice Walk - Easy Version

A walk on an easy level footpath high above the Mawddach estuary with stunning views. This walk returns over the same path. Part of the footpath is wheelchair accessible. There is a circular path that requires much more of an ascent and that is described separately.

Duration - Very leisurely 45 minutes for the walk to-and-fro along the level path stopping to enjoy the views.

Distance - Half mile maximum each way.

Access:

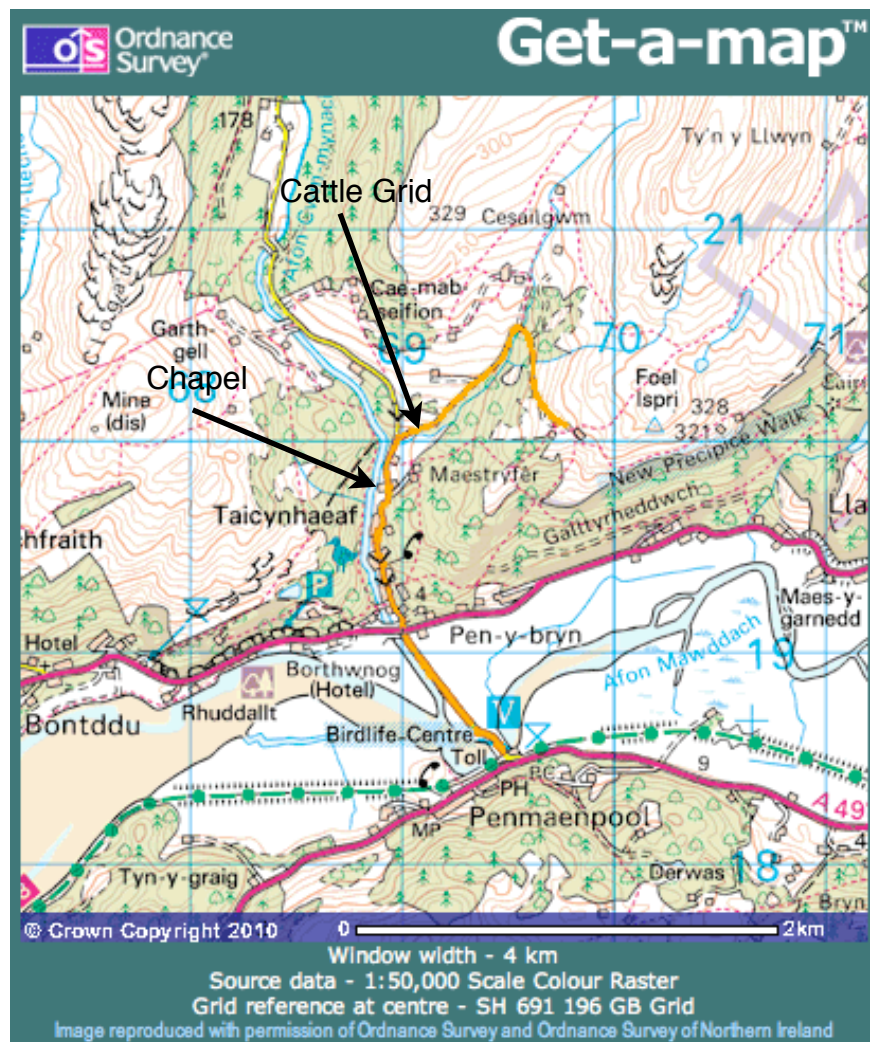

Drive to Penmaenpool and take road (shown in orange) over the toll bridge (60p in 2010). When you get to the main road the other side continue straight across up a narrow single track steep road through a village. After just under half a mile notice a chapel on the right. After a further 100-200 metres there is a right turn. Take this. Almost immediately you come to a gate with a cattle grid to the left that you can drive over.

You have gone wrong if this is not the case!

Stay on this narrow road. Notice where there are passing places in case you meet something coming the other way and need to reverse.

At one point there is a right fork, but you will probably take this anyway as the road straight ahead is even more uninviting than the road you are on.

About a mile from the cattle grid (having gone through two further gates) you come to the start of the walk near an occupied house. There is small amount of parking, but if full there are a number of flat grass areas adjacent to the road just back down the road you have come.

There are a number of way-marks near the house visible from the park. These are not very helpful. However it is simple to find the right way - just take the level path in front of the house and you will soon see a shale path marked as suitable for wheelchairs.

View looking seaward.

Looking down on the toll bridge and the George at Penmaenpool.

Looking down on the Mawddach with the Cader range in the background.

The grassy path beyond the wheelchair accessible path.